

About the Author

I could easily write predictable yarns but what struck me most was the damage OCD did to the son, Adam, who while on holidays in Limerick regularly reminded his mum that "next year is summer camp, but I'm not going".

Adam's mum tried everything to calm him for 12 months and as some parents were needed as "helpers", she said she would travel to "Acary Norfolk" and stay with him and so it continued: "No I'm not" "Don't you see?" until the day came and man with Adam arrived at the village school where cars enough to sail in summer camp lived.

Surprisingly though all those travelling, apart from teachers and support staff, were amazed by the spirit of leaving in in for the 1st time a five year old, Adam "I come here" when in fact he was a little boy mania by disturbing OCD and its associated demons.

Fast forward 15 years and while working in local warehouses I found myself manoeuvring a pallet labeled "made in Vietnam" and the words I'd heard so many times while growing-up "if only it would talk" came true and so Pete Pallet was born as a lovable character children should be able to learn from and "Pete Pallet's New School" and the support song "Clap Away the Nerves" has been received by parents of children about to start school as reassuring because "ever grown-ups get nervous".

Surprisingly enough of those marketing, apart from teachers and support staff, were reassured by the experience of being more for the first time a few parents (book) Adam's "Nasty Nasty" when it made him was a little boy reassured by understanding OCD and its associated issues.
