NEW SCHOOL

An entertaining and reassuring message for pre-school children and their parents.

Written by David Frosdick Illustrated by Mark Sean Wilson

About the Author

I could easily have predictably said that what struck me most was the damage OCD did to my son, Adam who while on holiday in Limerick regularly reminded his mom that "next year is summer camp but I'm not going". Adam's mom tried everything to calm him for 12 months and as some parents were worried as "healers" she said she would need to "scary Norell" and say with her and so it continued "no I'm not" then "yes you are" until the day she arrived and even with Adam arrived at the village school where there enough to sail to summer camp forest.

Surprisingly though all those traveling, spent time teachers and support staff were reassured by the spectra of having even for the first time a few parents identified Adam "to home best" when it must be was a little boy reassured by shyness OCD and its associated fears.

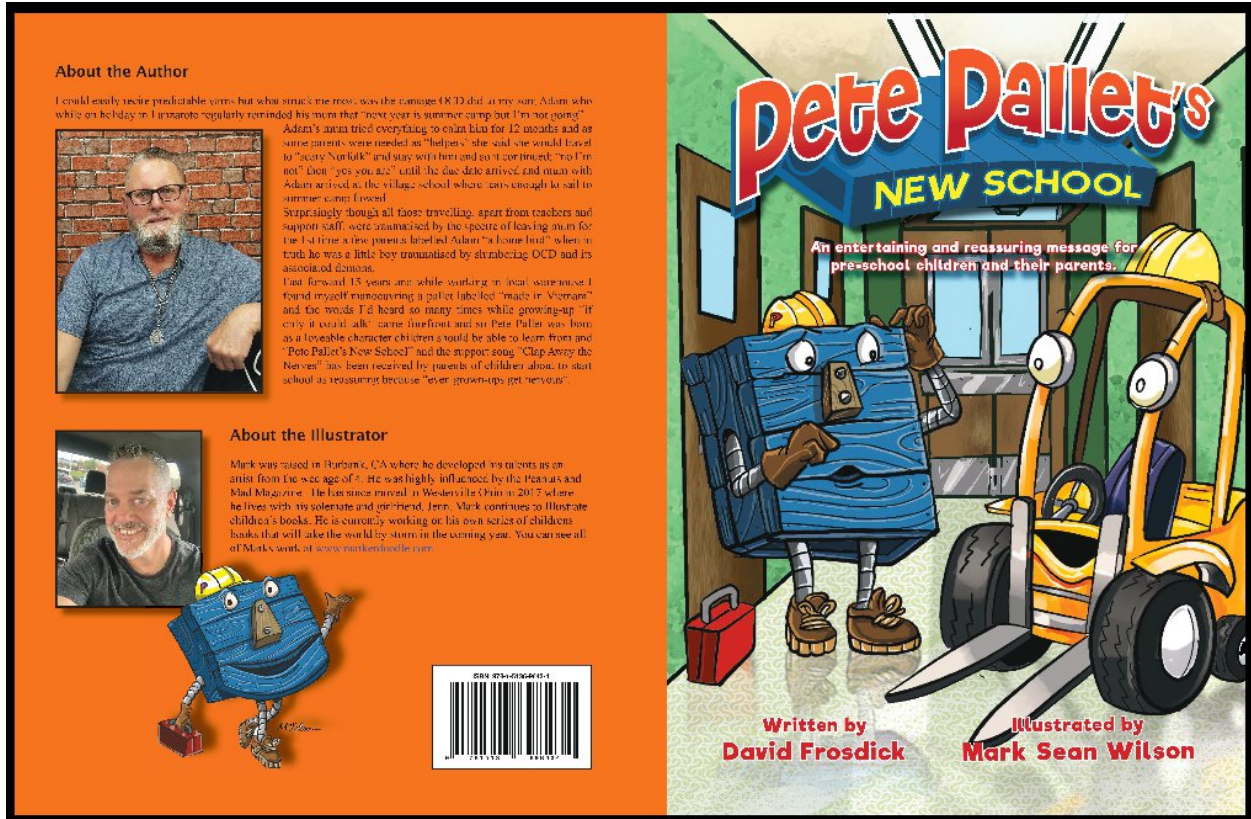

Fast forward 12 years and while working in local warehouse I found myself interviewing a "pilot teacher" made in Vermont and the words I'd heard so many times while growing up "if only it could talk" came flooding out so Pete Pallet was born as a lovable character children should be able to learn from and "Pete Pallet's New School" and the support song "Clap Away the Nerves" has been inspired by parents of children about to start school as reassuring because "even grown-ups get nervous".

Valuable Life Lessons, Loveable Character, Reduces Child's Anxiety.

About the Author

I could easily write predictable stories but what struck me most was the teenage OCD that my son, Adam, who while on holiday in Lanzarote regularly reminded by mum that "next year is summer camp, but I'm not going".

Adam's mum tried everything to calm him for 12 months and as some parents were needed as "helpers", she said she would travel to "Acacia Norfolk" and stay with him and so it continued: "No I'm not" "Don't you say that" until the day came and mum with Adam arrived at the village school where cars enough to sail to summer camp frosted.

Surprisingly though all fears travelling, apart from teachers and support staff, were diminished by the spectre of leaving him in for the 1st time a blue pallet labeled Adam's "home land" when in truth he was a little boy mania by attributing OCD and its associated demons.

Fast forward 15 years and while working in local warehouses I found myself manoeuvring a pallet labeled "made in Vietnam" and the words I'd heard so many times while growing-up "if only it would talk" came true and so Pete Pallet was born as a lovable character children should be able to learn from and "Pete Pallet's New School" and the support song "Clap Away the Nerves" has been received by parents of children about to start school as reassuring because "ever grown-ups get nervous".
