New Jersey Author Jay Dubya (John Wiessner).

A Christmas Carol by Jay Dubya.

Charles Dickens (1812-1870) spent most of his life in London and hadn't the foggiest notion why the hell he had ever done so. Dickens had a horrible childhood. His father had financial debts, so the government gave young Charles "the dick ends" by making his father live in poorhouses and workhouses, but fortunately not inside any government warehouses. Dickens' terrible exposure to poverty later made him a literary crusader advocating social justice. Such novels as David Copperfield and Oliver Twist reflect Charles Dickens's tremendous empathy for impoverished urban British children, along with their exploitation by the unsympathetic, apathetic adult industrial world.

Later in life, Dickens edited a magazine; was an amateur thespian, but the writer was not known to frequently associate with professional lesbians. The quite distinguished author gave many readings of his works throughout Europe and even did so while touring slums in the United States. The British literary giant was a contemporary of the great Mark Twain, and the two eminent men did meet, although Dickens was much older during the height of their fames.

Some of Charles Dickens' famous novels and books are A Tale of Two Cities, Great Expectations, and The Pickwick Papers. One of his most popular short fiction works had first been published in 1843 and was titled "A Christmas Carol", which featured a great character transformation in the personality of Ebenezer Scrooge from an old curmudgeon to a kind and loving benefactor. The story had been written in four sections known as "Staves", and here is a parody re-write of "A Christmas Carol."

A Christmas Carol is Jay Dubya's 69th published book. Besides Adult Satire, the prolific author writes in seven other separate genres being: Action/Adventure Novels, Non-Fiction Books, Mythology, Science-Fiction, Detective Stories, Paranormal Short Stories, and Young Adult Fantasy Novels.

Young Adult Fantasy Novels by Jay Dubya (John Wiessner)

<https://bookmarketingglobalnetwork.com/book-marketing-global-network/young-adult-fantasy-novels-by-jay-dubya/>

Author Biography: As of September 4, 2026, John Wiessner (Jay Dubya) has written 75 books.

Born in Hammonton, NJ in 1942, John Wiessner had attended St. Joseph School up to and including Grade 5. After his family moved from Hammonton to Levittown, Pa in 1954, John attended St. Mark School in Bristol, Pa. for Grade 6, St. Michael the Archangel School in Levittown for Grades 7 and 8 and then Immaculate Conception School, Levittown, Pa. for Grade 9. Bishop Egan High School, Levittown Pa was John's educational base for Grades 10 and 11, and later in 1960, the aspiring author graduated from Edgewood Regional High, Tansboro, NJ. John then next attended Glassboro State College, where he was an announcer for the school's baseball games and also read the nightly news and sports over WGLS, GSC's radio station.

John Wiessner had been primarily an English teacher in the Hammonton Public School System for 34 years, specializing in the instruction of middle school language arts. Mr. Wiessner was quite active in the Hammonton Education Association, serving in the capacities of Vice-President, building representative and finally, teachers' head negotiator for 7 years. During his lengthy teaching career, John had been nominated into "Who's Who Among American Teachers" three times. He also was quite active giving professional workshops at schools around South Jersey on the subjects of creative writing and the use of movie videos to motivate students to organize their classroom theme compositions. John Wiessner was very active in community service, being a past President of the Hammonton Lions Club, where he also functioned for many years as the club's Tail-Twister, Vice-President and Liontamer. John had been named Hammonton Lion of the Year in 1979 and in 2009 received the prestigious Melvin Jones Fellow Award, the highest honor that a Lion can receive from Lions International.

John also was a successful businessman, starting with being a Philadelphia Bulletin newspaper delivery boy for two years in the late 1950s in Levittown, Pennsylvania. After his family moved back to New Jersey in 1959, John worked at his grandparents and his parents' farm markets, Square Deal Farm (now Ron's Gardens in Hammonton) and Pete's Farm Market in Elm, respectively. He later managed his wife's parents' farm market, White Horse Farms in Elm for three summers. Also, in a business capacity, for 16 summers starting in 1967 John Wiessner had co-owned Dealers Choice Amusement Arcade on the Ocean City, Maryland boardwalk and also co-owned the New Horizon Tee-Shirt Store for eight summers (1973-'81) on the Rehoboth Beach, Delaware boardwalk. In addition, "Jay Dubya" was a co-owner of Wheel and Deal Amusement Arcade, Missouri Avenue and Boardwalk, Atlantic City. And then, for 18 summers beginning in 1986, John had been the Field Manager in charge of crew-leaders for Atlantic Blueberry Company (the world's largest cultivated blueberry farm), both the Weymouth and Mays Landing Divisions. After retiring from teaching in 1999, writing under the pen name Jay Dubya (his initials), John Wiessner became the author of 75 books in the genre Action/Adventure Novels, Sci-Fi/Paranormal Story Collections, Adult Satire, Young Adult Fantasy Novels and Non-Fiction Books. His books exist in hardcover, in paperback and in popular Kindle and Nook e-book formats. ']

In January of 2022, John Wiessner (Jay Dubya) was nominated into Marquis Who's Who in America, and in April of that same year, was one of nine distinguished Who's Who in America members honored with receiving Lifetime Achievement Awards, all nine sharing a news article of recognition appearing in the Wall Street Journal.

Review: The Arcane Arcade, (348 pages), Jay Dubya, Leonard Streitfeld

Google: Jay Dubya books Amazon.com Jay Dubya book: The Arcane Arcade (350 Pages) 5 Star Review: It takes advanced and gifted writing skills to successfully write a short story collection that will capture the imagination of the readers and hold their interest to the end. Two authors skilled at their craft have teamed up to bring you 'The Arcane Arcade'. Dr. Leonard Streitfeld had been John Wiessner's eye doctor for many years. Len Streitfeld and Jay Dubya have written and rewritten the stories "The Chess Set," "The Cups," "The Incense Burner," "Reflections," "Stained Glass" "The Image" and "The Black Magic Pen" many times until all sixteen tales appearing in The Arcane Arcade have evolved into their present quality literature form.

The Arcane Arcade collection is book crafted in the paranormal experience and the tales have evolved into this great example of short story literature. Here are my short descriptions of each story in 'The Arcane Arcade'. In "The Chess Set" the wealthy chess master is confronted by the Black Knight. In "The Cups" a snow globe scene pales in comparison to this coffee mug collection. In "A Christmas Doll" it is the gift of a ballerina doll that changes everything. In "Reflections" we are reminded that charity begins in the heart. In "The Dark Side" we witness "One perpetual nightmare that's been moving in perpetual motion." In "Photographs" we are reminded that a picture is worth a thousand words. In "Premonitions" is it a chance encounter, coincidence or something much more. In "The Combat Mission That Never Was" we learn "Heaven Can Wait but Hell Cannot".

In "The Skull" we read what happens to an unclaimed corpse that might surprise you. In "Stained Glass" it is the mystery surrounding the broken heavenly stained-glass window. In "The Image" conjures up the question is it "animal, vegetable, mineral, or strange thing". In "An Incense Burner" New Orleans Mardi Gras turns into a veritable nightmare. In "The Dye Is Cast" as the song titled "16 men on a dead man's chest, yo-ho, ho and a bottle of rum" pierces through the Bermuda Triangle fog. In "The Talismans" we examine the actions of one persistent seeker of wisdom. In "The Tattoo" finds Dennis in the throws of an inebriated ink nightmare. In "The Black Magic Pen" a writer's dream of literary perfection and international fame makes the tools of his trade a necessary phenomenon. I would have to say that the short story titled

"An Incense Burner" is my favorite out of this well-written collection. Let me bring you into the story here: At 11:55 p.m., the New Age black magic medium prepared the 'spiritual laboratory operational card table', the very essential incense burner, the vital red votive candles, and the male voodoo doll was then dressed in similar white shirt and black pants, just as Jason's principal adversary had been wearing at the coin club meeting. Newman then spread Rosco Scol's former note scraps over the male doll's body. The obnoxious, loudmouthed Coin Organization President had never conceived or realized that he had made an immense blunder by inadvertently leaving behind the hand-shredded documentation with his indecipherable, crude handwriting scribbled upon it. As the den's grandfather clock pendulum signaled the stroke of midnight, Jason snickered as the black arts' prestidigitator began performing his 'other world methodology'. The devil's new metaphysical priest then roughly thrust the red-hot pin into the doll's throat and next, the hex practitioner meanly and spitefully twisted the pin back and forth several times to dramatically emphasize his great enmity for his avowed enemy. Four more pins were soon viciously inserted, a separate representative one shoved into each of the doll's arms and legs.

The incense burner was then wildly smoking-out dense fumes and billows, and a moment later a ghost-like cloud rose and wafted, and then the dark gaseous mass hovered above the voodoo operating card table. The fog formation slowly drifted towards the targeted doll, and when the fumes encountered the lying figure's throat, the thick, hazy mass mystically swished into the doll's voice box, and then the visible gas phenomenon suddenly disappeared from visual existence. The unearthly ceremony was over at precisely 1:00 a.m. and the vital items that had been used for the "spiritual retribution communication" were again stealthily placed and concealed inside their respective storage hiding compartments. However, the five malignant pins still remained implanted in the doll's anatomy. "Languish in your anguish," laughed the contemporary warlock to the tiny representation of corpulent Rosco Scola. "Your pain is my gain!" Jason Newman humorously rhymed. "Let's see what happens to your throat and to your four doomed appendages. Ha, ha, ha!" Did this voodoo from this self-learned witch-doctor work? I will let you discover for yourself. Review by Theodocia McLean (Book Marketing Global Network).

EXTRA: Ever since last Thanksgiving, various U.S. shopping malls (Mall of America, Hamilton Place, The Summit) through their Barnes and Noble stores, along with large Canadian shopping centres through Chapters Indigo and Coles, have been promoting some of my books. Perhaps you could mention this in one of your Internet uploads.
